Annapolis Exam.

To Be Held Soon.
A competitive examination for appointment by Senator B. R. Tillman to a vacancy in the United States Naval Academy will be held in Columbia on Friday, January 22, in Room 4, Davis College on the campus of the university. The contest is open to all young men of the State who can qualify under the Academy regulations as to age and physical condition. One must be between the ages of sixteen and twenty years, and must bring to the examination a physician's certificate of health. A second vacancy is open, under similar conditions, to young men of the second district, who may thus compete for both honors. Congressman J. F. Barnes will make the appointment from the second district. The examination will test such knowledge as may be expected of a student who has completed a full high school course. The subjects are: Arithmetic, Algebra, through Quadratics; Plane Geometry, three books; English, Grammar, including parsing and analysis; Composition and Literature; Spelling; Geography of the United States and the world; and United States and world's history. Of the field to be covered, a general idea may be had from the printed regulations of the United States Naval Academy. The applicants should be prepared on the eight subjects listed above. Professors E. D. Easterling and Henry Davis, of the University faculty, will conduct the examination. Candidates will assemble promptly at 8:45 a. m. on the day appointed. Work will begin at nine o'clock and continue until five, with an hour's intermission for dinner from one until two. Upon request, further information will be furnished by the Department of Education.

An Expression of Appreciation.

The following expression of appreciation of Dr. E. A. Hines, the new superintendent of the Anderson County Hospital, from the Anderson County Board of Health, was read with interest here. There are many Occanee people who will read with little interest the dispatch printed below, sent out from Anderson on December 31st: "Dr. E. A. Hines, of Seneca, secretary of the State Medical Association, also editor of the State Medical Journal, becomes superintendent of the Anderson County Hospital tomorrow, succeeding Miss Cochran, who returns to her home in Baltimore. The position of head nurse is created and Miss Kunz, of New York, is appointed. She reported for duty tonight." Dr. Hines has been among the foremost physicians not only of Occanee, but of South Carolina. The Courier regrets exceedingly that Occanee loses him from within her borders. We join with hosts of others, however, in wishing him and his family well in their new home. Dr. Hines will prove a model head for the Anderson institution, we feel sure.

In order to get the advantage of the government man's services the city will have to provide some shed or some place where the market can be operated. The market will be opened for business on several days in the week, and the country people will be advised so that they can bring in their produce, and on these days the housewives will arrange to visit the market.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE TO BE COMPELLED.

Bill Approved as First Choice by Evans.

SPARTANBURG, Jan. 5.—Superintendent Frank Evans of the city schools and chairman of the legislative committee of the State Teachers' Association gave out here today the text of the compulsory education bill, to be introduced in the legislature soon after it convenes. The bill is a State-wide measure and was introduced as first choice of the educators who met in Columbia two weeks ago. The following are in brief the provisions of the bill:

"Section 1. That from and after March 1, 1915, all normal children between the ages of eight and 14 shall attend the local public school continuously for the full term of each year. Attendance upon some other public school, or upon private or church school, may be attended in lieu of the public school of the district in which the child resides, but these will be required to keep accurate records of attendance of such pupils.

"Sec. 2. This act shall not apply in cases where physicians make certificates that the child's health is not such as to make it practicable for it to attend school, or in cases where, because of poverty, the children are without books and clothing. Provided, That when books and clothing shall have been provided, through charity or other means, the child shall no longer be exempt.

"Sec. 3. This section dealt with excuses that may be accepted by the school authorities.

"Sec. 5. Any parent, guardian or other person violating the provision of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be liable to a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $25 and upon failure to pay shall be imprisoned not to exceed 30 days. The penalty is not effective, however, until the party is convicted of a second offense.

The remaining section deals with the appointment of the attendance officers and their duties. The appointment is with the board of trustees. His duties will be to keep a school census and be allowed 3 cents for every child of school age each school year. For serving attendance notices he will be allowed 25 cents.

Efforts to Get Ship Bill Before Senate

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—Administration leaders said tonight they would make a determined fight tomorrow to get the government ship purchase bill before the senate for debate. That every parliamentary expedient will be used by Republican senators to delay its consideration was demonstrated today when committee amendments were offered.

Relationship of Medical Association to New Law

Interesting Paper Read Before County Medical Society by Dr. J. R. Young.

The relationship of the Medical Association to the New Law, was the subject of an interesting paper by Dr. J. R. Young read yesterday before the meeting of the County Medical Association, held at the hospital. The paper is as follows:

There is something in the air during Christmas and New Year season that prompts us to introspection. The days themselves are in no way different from those that precede and follow. They are bounded in the East by sunrise and in the west by sunset. This analytical turn of mind or introspection is due to no alchemy of Father Time, but is born of tradition and is nurtured in the lives and hearts of each succeeding generation. It finds expression in the formal resolution which some are wont to make, and in the unwritten resolutions which we all more or less unconsciously make that this year will be our best. It was this mood that actuated our president when he wrote us that letter of exhortation and I am sure that this mood is fitting that we at this time pause and study together some questions that are of great importance to us as custodians of the health of our community, and no question we might choose would be of greater importance than the question of vital statistics.

Let us study first the benefits that will accrue from the State wide observance of the vital statistics law, the registration of all births and deaths.

If complete and accurate information as to death of all human beings, with date and cause of death, were obtainable, the various national, state and municipal public health agencies could observe more intelligently. They would know what part of our mortality is preventable and when and where the preventable diseases occur. Epidemic diseases could be quickly detected and proper preventative measures adopted. The relative value of these preventative measures could be determined by noting the results secured. Individual cities and localities could determine their own death rate, and by comparing with that of other cities, could determine whether their public health agencies were getting satisfactory results from their work.

No home seekers and immigrants would like to consult accurate records of health conditions, before settling in any community. From a local standpoint official records of deaths would be of value in matters of inheritance and the settling up of estates. So the making of a death certificate, instead of being a trivial or unimportant affair, may be a very important factor for the physician to perform. For the death certificate often gives the first warning of the presence in a community of pestilential disease. Death registration permits health officers to attack epidemics in their incipience, and it is only when preventative measures are applied at the exact time and place of outbreak that an epidemic can be quickly suppressed. When we recall over half the deaths in the United States each year are due to preventable diseases, and that we already possess the scientific knowledge which makes this prevention possible, the duty of the physician in this respect assumes life and death proportions. Dr. Irving Fisher is responsible for the statement that "by the intelligent application of our present knowledge the average span of human life may be increased full 15 years." What this would mean to the human family in added happiness, productivity and efficiency is beyond comprehension.

This prolongation of life however, is not an individual matter, but is dependent largely upon intelligent public action. It involves (a) the application of preventative measures, (b) the prevention of infant mortality, (c) the education of the people that they may more intelligently protect themselves, (d) the suppression of all causes of illness or accident where these things are controllable. All this no doubt sounds utopian and I grant that the full accomplishment of these ideal plans are at this time impossible, but when our city and every city in the country realizes with President Wilson that one of its most important duties is the conservation of the health of its citizens and places at the head of its health department a competent and suitably trained health officer, an important step will have been taken in the accomplishment of this ideal. (Let it be understood that these remarks are not intended as a criticism of the members of the board of health.)

Most of the data on the above paper was gotten from the reading of pamphlet of vital statistics issued by the Association of Life Insurance Presidents.

of Anderson. I happen to know that these men have done some earnest work and are carrying on the duties as well, and possibly better than could any of the rest of us.) So with this ecology, unnecessary perhaps, I want to say that in my opinion the day is fast passing when a city may reasonably expect satisfactory public health results from a few hours work a week from some busy physician. The duties are so numerous, the problems so complex that especially trained public health officials are a necessity. If we are to accomplish the most in the conservation of the life and health of our community.

Now, what about birth? Why should the birth of Johnny Jones be recorded in legal writ? Last year when Sammie came his name was recorded on the decorated page of the family Bible, and the record was complete. Not so with Johnny. On his birth certificate his whole pedigree must appear, and when in due time this certificate is filed in the fire-proof vaults of the State Board of Health, he will have incontestable proof for all time to come, that he was duly born.

He will have official proof of his parentage. By the same proof he may go to school when of proper age and not before.

By this same certificate he may show when he has reached the legal age for employment in factory. If he be of foreign born parents this certificate may protect the American born man from enforced military duty when visiting the mother country.

Prosecutions dealing with "age of consent" may be settled by official record, and not by conjecture. The exact date of birth may be of immense importance in the settlement of inheritance. The story is told of a young man who established his age and saved of his inheritance by the common knowledge that he was born on the same day as a certain registered horse.

One-third of the blindness in the United States is due to lack of care of the eyes at birth. In many communities the health authorities are endeavoring to supply this care, but their effort will be futile unless births are properly registered.

So we see that the recording of births and deaths furnish all public agencies the material to work on. "Vital statistics are the book-keeping of health and we cannot economize health any more successfully than we can economize money; indeed we keep books on money and we keep books on health." Now, what about our new law? It is a uniform act, constructed by the workers of the census department of the U. S. government, and is practically identical with that which has been passed by most of the other states. The birth and death certificate blanks which we are required to fill out are likewise uniform. They are concise and simple. It takes a very few minutes for each of us to carry a supply of these four obstetric tags so that we can call out birth certificates with the speed of the "death certificates" will not be able to be forgotten, because the undertaker will remind us of it, but unless we make it a rigid rule to fill out birth certificates at once, we will be liable to overlook them. This we must not do, because "death registration without birth registration is like accurate accounting of expenses, but without consideration of income. Let us resolve that this law which the physicians of this State have been talking about and working for over a half century shall have our loyal support.
